Much has changed here in the last years. While being a meeting point for the neighborhood a few years ago, the Quartierbeizli is usually empty now. Former inhabitants moved away - new ones came. The area is now a place for workers during the day - they leave in the evening.

/ a freelance car mechanic, working in the area since 33 years

Some people come to talk with friends after work or school, some to have a minute for themselves - some for rest, some for rendez-vous.

/ a girl, reading a book

Inhabitants use the place for barbecue evenings, birthday parties or afternoon sunbathings. It is also a place for flea markets, an annual local amateur soccer tournament and public viewings during the World Cup.

/ a migrant inhabitant, living in an apartments of the block

The street is a smorgasbord of people and different cultures. It is always busy by locals and strangers, although or maybe exactly because of the heavy traffic.

/ a student, living in a nearby flat-sharing community

Soccer games stimulate the area. Concerts even more. While being locked-up and unused in the everyday life, it then becomes a crowded place.

/ a daily middle-age passer-by on his way to work
